Landscape Structures Acquires Aquatic Recreation Company, Expands into Water and Splash Play Market

Delano, Minn. (Oct. 2, 2015) — Landscape Structures Inc., the leading designer and manufacturer of commercial playground equipment based in Delano, Minn., announced today that the company has acquired Eden Prairie, Minn.-based Aquatic Recreation Company, LLC (ARC) and Commercial Aquatic Engineering (CAE).

ARC is a premier splash pad and water park designer, manufacturer and installer, founded in 2002. Focusing on providing the most innovative, diverse and interactive water and splash play equipment in the industry, their products have been used in municipal spray parks, aquatic centers, hotels and resorts, campgrounds, fitness centers, housing developments, military bases and amusement parks. Founded in 1995, CAE has designed and built more than 1,000 water feature projects, with expertise in design, fountain finishes, fountain mechanical systems and electrical systems. Day-to-day operations will be managed by co-founder and Managing Director Greg Stoks in their current facility in Eden Prairie.

“Water and splash play is a key part of the recreational play experience and by acquiring ARC and CAE, we can more effectively meet customer needs with a one-stop solution. The ARC/CAE team brings 25 years of aquatic expertise to the equation, which will allow us to provide water solutions that will delight communities,” said Pat Faust, president of Landscape Structures. “ARC/CAE is a great cultural fit to our organization and we’re excited to welcome their employees to the Landscape Structures family.”

“Joining the Landscape Structures team provides a great opportunity for our staff and clients,” said Greg Stoks, managing director and co-founder of ARC and CAE. “ARC’s expertise complements the
